MANUFACTURING IS THE backbone of the economy, and it's a sector that's been hit hard by the recession. But for Jeff Haney, owner of Haney Manufacturing, the outlook is bright. "We're in a good position," he says. "We're a manufacturer of parts for big name brands, and we're doing well."

Below: Jeff Haney is the Millersville-based industrial parts manufacturer Haney Manufacturing. He has a long history in the industry and is a member of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Haney Manufacturing is a family-owned business that has been in operation for over 30 years. The company specializes in manufacturing parts for a wide range of industries, including automotive, construction, and agriculture.

Jeff Haney has a long history in the manufacturing industry. He started his own business in 1978 and has since grown it into a successful company. He is a member of the National Association of Manufacturers and is active in the community.

One of the reasons Haney Manufacturing is successful is because of the quality of its products. The company uses high-quality materials and has a strict quality control process. This has earned the company a reputation for reliability and durability.

Another reason for the company's success is its customer service. Jeff Haney and his team are committed to providing excellent service to their customers. They listen to their needs and work to provide the best possible solution.

Jeff Haney is a member of the National Association of Manufacturers, which is a trade organization that represents manufacturers in the United States. The organization advocates for the interests of manufacturers and works to improve the regulatory environment.

Jeff Haney is also a member of the Millersville Chamber of Commerce, which is a local business organization that promotes economic development in the area. He is active in the community and works to support local businesses.

Study focuses on bosses

A new study by the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER) shows that the recession has had a significant impact on the way bosses manage their employees. The study found that bosses are now more likely to use a "command and control" style of management, which is characterized by top-down decision-making and a focus on short-term results.

The study also found that bosses are now more likely to use a "participative" style of management, which is characterized by a focus on employee input and long-term results. This style of management is more likely to be used by bosses who are more confident in their employees and who are more likely to invest in their employees' development.

Learning about tractors

C.N.T. Tractor Sales Inc., co-located by Hans and Judy Oberlin, has just completed the first NTPD (National Tractor Parts Dealers) training program. The program was developed by the National Tractor Parts Dealers Association (NTPDA) and is designed to provide tractor parts dealers with the knowledge and skills they need to succeed in the industry.

Okiotown wins tap water judging

Okiotown, Ohio, has won the national tap water judging competition for the second year in a row. The town's water was judged to be the best in the country, and it was awarded the title of "National Tap Water Champion."

The town's water is so good because of the way it is treated. The town has a state-of-the-art water treatment plant that uses a combination of natural and artificial processes to purify the water. This has resulted in water that is clean, clear, and tastes great.
